

INVICTUS BY GENNA

GRIEF & LOSS SERVICES

Share Your Grief Story to Help Others: Be Part of a Book About How to Support Grievers

Dr. Genna Reeves, an award-winning social sciences researcher, is working on a book project about how to support people who are grieving. The book will include real stories and helpful ideas from people like you to help others better understand how to be there for someone after a loss.

Why Participate

Your story can help others understand how to support grieving individuals. By sharing your experiences, you'll contribute to a meaningful resource for those navigating loss.

Who Can Participate

Anyone who is 18+ and has experienced grief or supported someone grieving is welcome to participate. Your unique perspective is valuable, whether personal or professional.

How To Participate

Simply reach out to express your interest! Interviews can be scheduled at your convenience, either in person, by phone, or virtually. A written survey option is also available. Interviews last about one hour.

What To Know First

Participation is voluntary, and no payment will be provided. Your privacy will be respected, and you can choose to share your story anonymously if preferred. You will sign an interview release agreement.

Meet The Author/Interviewer

Genna Reeves, Ph.D. is a Certified Grief Educator and INELDA-trained death doula based in Northern New Mexico. She practices privately through Invictus by Genna: Grief & Loss Services and serves as the New Mexico Community Liaison for HeartLight Center, a grief support nonprofit. With a rich background in education, research, history, and memorialization, Genna specializes in grief peer support, funeral planning, celebrant services, creative expressions of grief, and sudden/traumatic loss.

Questions? Ready to Interview?

Contact Genna Reeves, Ph.D.: invictusbygenna@outlook.com